

Name: Uyen Trinh, Co May Nguyen, Ha Nguyen

Team name: Natural Beauties

Email address: hnguyen30@unishanoi.org, uyentrinh@unishanoi.org, hnguyen128@unishanoi.org

School: United Nations International School of Hanoi

I wrote my PSA as my reverse poem.

I wanted to highlight that people have this pessimistic way of thinking when it comes to changing the world; however, not only is that a detriment to encouraging those around you to do the little things such as 'saying no to straws' but it also contributes to negatively connoting environmentally practices overall.

My reverse poem when read from bottom up wants to be uplifting and empowering. Here is the link to it:

<https://www.facebook.com/photo.php?fbid=2348454655270115&set=a.357001664415434&type=3&theater>

And the following is my poem.
facebook

Posted on

Because we can, we will change the world is a lie
We are not capable of mitigating climate change
And we've tried hard enough
We are nobodies
And we refuse to believe that we must make a difference
Because environmental pollution is catastrophic
We believe that
There is no way to save Earth
And It is foolish to assume that
Because this is home,
We need to commit to changing our habits
It is evident that
Plastic dependency is permanent
No longer can it be said that
Future generations will see Mother Nature as she is
People are forced to believe that through hard work and dedication,
We still make no impact
That
Stuff is destined to sit in landfills
We would never say that
What matters, is where we start

UNLESS WE TURN OUR MINDS AROUND

Stephanie Nguyen is with Uyen Trinh and Ha Nguyen.
3 hrs ·

Take a look around you and see how much waste we all are producing. This stuff that we throw away don't really "go away". Earth cannot digest plastic. They turn into waste and pollute our planet. It is still not too late to save our home! Start with the little steps such as "say no to straws", or purchase a water bottle to reduce the use of plastic bottles. #PGC2018

We hope to change your perspective about waste through the reverse poem below! Read and think about Turning Green

Because we can, we will change the world
is a lie
We are not capable of mitigating climate change
And we've tried hard enough
We are nobodies
And we refuse to believe that
we must make a difference
Because environmental pollution is catastrophic
We believe that
There is no way to save Earth
And It is foolish to assume that
Because this is home,
We need to commit to changing our habits
It is evident that
Plastic dependency is permanent
No longer can it be said that
Future generations will see Mother Nature as she is
People are forced to believe that
through hard work and dedication,
We still make no impact
That
Stuff is destined to sit in landfills
We would never say that
What matters, is where we start

UNLESS WE TURN OUR MINDS AROUND

