Why do you think you're better
If your culture is not the same?
Yes, maybe you seem different
But deep inside all are the same.

Why do they think they're better?
If one is black and one is white,
If one is man and one is woman.

They are the same, that is their right.

If one is straight and one is gay,
They are no different, just the same
If one is Christian and one is Jew,
All come from God, we are the same.

So, get to know all people,
And show them what you think and do,
You'll see how others live their lives.
When you like them, then they'll like you.

If one learns to understand
And respect all points of view,
Then peace on Earth must surely come
It is up to you. And you. And you....

Summary:

The speech went well, I spoke the first part in French and when I forgot what to say I spoke in English. The audience was very kind and added input when I asked for it. We talk about different things that we could eliminate to eliminate discrimination. We also pondered what it would be like if everyone wore the same things if that would decrease some discrimination and what other consequences that would bring. We talked about how personally we wouldn't want to be discriminated so we can't treat others like that. Since this was an older crowd we discussed what they could do at their work to decrease stigmas and discrimination. We all agreed that people who are different and are often viewed poorly in this area (Muslims and other immigrants) need to be talked about in a positive light. We need to talk about the positive experiences we have had with these people who practice this religion and create a bright atmosphere for them and for everyone.
