

quincie.b | Team Swag Only Certified Freaks

Instagram | s4s.project

Email | quincie.b8@gmail.com

School | Olympian High

Day Five | Greener Challenge

Watch these short videos about Indigenous rights, environmental racism, women and climate change, and Cancer Alley to enrich understanding of climate justice with specific examples. Create a piece of art (physical or digital of any medium, size, or length) that tells a story of environmental injustice and/or advocates for environmental justice. Think about how you can communicate the gravity of these experiences, the importance of visibility, and the necessity for solutions within your artwork.

Caption: Climate justice is about equality and human rights; it is the fight to make sure that the environment is safe for all communities, not just those with privileged and power. Fight for those who deserve climate justice, fight for those who unheard, but never voiceless.

Art created by our team's lovely Samara Rodgers @_volleyart_

Post:

One of the effects of systemic racism and classism in our country is combined with the growing environmental problems of the 1980s, onward. People in low-income areas are disproportionately affected by climate change. Unfortunately, many low-income areas make their citizens have to travel many miles during the hotter months due to excessive heat. This, however, is often not discussed because we are made to believe that climate change affects us all equally. We need climate justice, and we need it now!

Post Screenshot:

