

Elise Gard
Elisegard99
elisegard@aol.com
University of Kansas
Day 13 Greenest

Here's a shirt that I got at Goodwill a couple years ago. I bleach-dyed this shirt this summer to try to give it new life, but I still haven't been wearing it. It's just simply pink and white, so I think it would make good decor. I have a ton of plants, and am running out of room on my dress to put them, so I thought it would be fun to make a macrame plant hanger out of the shirt.

I used this video tutorial: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Y9rChuNSnkl>

Instead of throwing this shirt away or even donating where no one will probably ever buy it, turning it into something new is such a productive way of turning "trash" into treasure. I've been looking into buying plant macrame hangers and I will definitely do this with any old t-shirts I have.

To make my wardrobe more sustainable, I can go to thrift stores, garage sales, and shop on poshmark. I made a pledge on Day 2 to only buy second-hand clothes for the rest of the year, and I think that's a good goal to have even for the rest of my life.

Here's my before and after photos, and there's a timelapse I posted on my instagram here: <https://www.instagram.com/p/CGTkZ3fDqyo/?igshid=1kh7p7uzrc3g2>

