My favorite shirt - Uniqlo, 100% Cotton, produced in Bangladesh - not a good sign, as millions of people there are garment workers - and not under the best conditions. Workers in Bangladesh are vulnerable to hunger, low wages, and even COVID this year. As for the environmental aspect, the materials to make the shirt and then the final product must have been transported hundreds of miles just to reach a store near me.

greenmantha today, i realized just how much more aware i need to be when it comes to fashion: though i thought i understood fast fashion well enough before, i now understand that change goes beyond making better clothing choices and into reworking the fashion industry and holding businesses accountable.
